LAWN TENNIS, GOLFEXPLANATIONS IN CASE YALE
SHOULD BEAT HARVARD THIS YEAR

New York, Sept. 23.—If Yale should beat Harvard during the football season, explanations will be offered to fit the case. Among the most prominent will be these:

1. Yale's new coaching system with Jones at the head, Mike Sweeney acting as his right hand man and Walter Camp lending his expert advice.

2. Loss of efficiency in Harvard's coaching system because of Percy Haughton's having to devote most of his time to the affairs of his ball club, the Boston Braves.

So many things have been blamed on coaching systems during the last few years, there is more of this trifling business every season—that persons not well versed in football might believe the game is entirely played by the coaches, that the players have nothing to do with the ultimate result. Would it be heresy against modern gridiron conditions to suggest that perhaps other factors than the coaching system enter into the problem? How about these:

1. Harvard has lost Eddie Mahan, the greatest all-around player of the last ten years and one of the greatest in history.

2. Harvard will also miss the services of King, Watson and Boles, the entire remainder of the backfield, in addition to Mahan. Others who have been graduated are the entire regular line with the exception of Ham and Captain Dammun. Among the missing linemen are Gilman and Soucy, who rank with the best tackles and ends in some time.

3. Yale will have in her backfield Harry Legore, who on his showing two years ago before he was declared ineligible, belonged almost in the same class with Mahan. Unless accidents befall him it is pretty certain he will be universally acclaimed the most valuable all-around player of this season.

4. Yale also retains Church, Capt. Black, Van Nostrand, Bingham, Baldrige and other crackbacks.

Is it not possible that these last four elements may cut some figure? What would have happened last year if Eddie Mahan had suddenly decided to quit Harvard and enter Yale? Subtract the sum total of his value from the Harvard assets and add it to the Yale side of the ledger and there would have been a different story to tell.

Without Mahan, the greatest football player of his day, Harvard would have been at least 40 percent weaker. Add him to Yale and Yale would have been 50 percent stronger.

Almost that very thing is going to eventuate this season. Harvard is without Mahan and Yale has Legore added. And don't let anybody tell you that this Legore is nowhere near as good as Mahan. Before the season ends you will notice talk about him in the same vein that Mahan was spoken of last year. Harvard's loss of Mahan and Yale's gain of Legore will almost even the balance, without counting other factors such as Yale's retention of more experienced and capable men than the Crimson.

If a pop-eyed enthusiast were more desirous of placing a small wager this early on the Yale-Harvard combat, the Bulldog would be a mighty good stead to carry the bet.

What explanation can be offered by those coaching system bugs on the proposition of the Yale-Princeton tussle last year? Yale won the game simply because Billy Moore, almost always a sure catch, muffed a forward pass near the goal line in the last minute of play when there was nobody in position to bar his path. Had he caught that ball he would have added a touchdown to the Tiger total and the Juggernaut would have been the victor. Should an incident of this nature be blamed upon our credited to coaching system?

A coach can form his material into a machine, but he can't always tell just what the machine will do when it gets on the field. With all due respect to sideline signalling, it is largely a matter of the men themselves after the whistle blows. The best laid plans of any coach may go smash through the forgetfulness of a quarterback or a mechanical slip such as Billy Moore's.

Here's an admonition worth remembering—watch Billy Moore this year.

OLD ELI PINS ITS HOPES TO LEGORE

Harry Legore.

John H. Rush, otherwise known as Speedy Rush, the Tiger coach, regards Moore as one of the most promising backs he ever laid eyes on. Bill has gained tremendously in speed in the last twelve months, as witness his victory in the 220 yard dash in the intercollegiate championships at Cambridge last June. He also has added fifteen pounds extra weight, so that he will tip the beam in football costume in the neighborhood of 170 pounds this year. Right now he appears to be the closest rival of Legore for premiere honors during the campaign that lies ahead.

Knowing the characteristics of Moore as we do, having followed his career since he began playing football at DeWitt Clinton High School in New York, we take no hesitation in predicting a brilliant effort for him, one so brilliant that it will make complete amends for his unfortunate error in the crucial moments of the last Yale game. We feel that he will do somewhat as Fred Merkle did in baseball. Merkle it will be recalled, is the fellow whose mental lapse lost a pennant for the New York Giants in 1905 and then played such great ball for McGraw during ensuing campaigns first as a player in the National League. Instead of being discouraged by his misdeed, Billy Moore will be more determined to serve his Alma Mater well, so that he will prove an even better football player because of his one big slip. Billy Moore is that kind of a fellow.

Those who bewail the misfortune of Cornell in losing the great Charley Barrett, Mahan's nearest rival last year, might just as well cause and contemplate the deeds of a young man named Shiverick. Last fall when Barrett was injured in the first few minutes of the game with Harvard and was obliged to retire, young Shiverick got his first chance to shine. He was the star of that game and also performed spectacularly in later battles.

This boy Shiverick has not the crushing power that Barrett owned, but he is fairly close to the former captain in other ways. He is a sterling open field runner, a crack punter and passer, a strong man in interference and a good tackler on defense. Chances are he will be Cornell's most useful actor this year.

Harvard will not be without individual star backfield men, Casey, former Exeter marvel, who shone with the freshmen last year, seems the most promising back of the squad. He is a big fellow with plenty of speed.

It will be interesting to observe the doings of Legore, Moore, Shiverick and Casey and make comparisons. And don't forget that Penn, now coached with Bob Fowell, has Howard Berry, that wonderful all-around athlete, and that Columbia owns in Howard Miller one of the most capable all-around quarterbacks in sight. The outlook is for a fine crop of heroes.

OAKS LOSE TO
BEAVERS 4 TO 1Oakland Scores Lone Tally in Fourth—Gloomy
Weather.

San Francisco, Sept. 22.—Great globs of gloomy weather hung over the ball yard, but G. G. and G. W. didn't deter the Beavers from nipping the Oaks for another game. Score 4 to 1. Incidentally and by way of jamming the feature up in the lead where it belongs, let it be announced that Del Howard's men pulled the first triple play of the local season. More of that anon. The Beavers won until the fourth frame ere scoring. Southworth propelled a double and Howard, trying for a bunt, scratched a single to third. Roche outed to Lane. Southworth tried to beat it home, but was caught by a country mile. Then up stepped young Mr. Williams, who proceeded to whang the leather clear out of the lot. In the sixth session the Beavers grabbed another brave of tallies. Roche shot to left. Williams singled to center and Rodgers gained first because he was nicked by the ball. Then Mr. Ward cracked the pill to right and two Beavers scored. And now for that triple play. Houck lined to Barry, who was playing close in for a bunt. Mal shot the ball to Berger with Rodgers directed from the bag and Berger in turn set the ball to Kenworthy. The ball was squinting on first for the third out. It was a fast triple play and the audience stood up on its hind legs at the same time emitting the well-known roar of applause. The Oaks scored their lone tally in the fourth.

Brooklyn, Sept. 22.—Brooklyn won from St. Louis today, 11 to 1. The season's record between the clubs is: Brooklyn 15, St. Louis 7. The contest was a farce because of the free hitting of the league leaders and Mead's wildness. Warmouth pitched the last two innings and yielded eight hits and four runs. Marquard toyed with the visitors.

Erickson, one of the Wolverton candidates for glory in the big league, started for the visitors' dugout only long enough to be driven back into the Seal trenches. His retreat was in the third frame, wherein he allowed Walter a triple to the centerfield fence and then passed Koerner. Whereat, he was pulled out in favor of Curly Brown. In the first two innings one run was made off Hogg, but he was the real tightwad when he got into a hole. He was scored on in only one frame, the seventh. Then Sepulveda led off with a double to center and scored on a single by Fitzgerald. Fitz went to second on the throwin to third on an error by Bessler and home on Bodie's double. The Angels started off in the first with Maggert drawing a double to left and scoring on a single to right by Ellis. In the third Walter drew a triple and scored on a sacrifice after Brown had replaced Erickson.

The game was won in the sixth when Bessler got on with a single to right and was chased in by a home run down the third base foul line by Maggert. After that Brown allowed but one hit.

Wins 10 to 8.

Salt Lake, Sept. 23.—Howard Gregory blew into town the day before yesterday and Skipper Buddy Ryan heard about it, so the next thing that Howard knew was that he was in the Salt Lake uni and sitting on the bench at Majestic park. Now Howard has pitched for the Utes before—to be historically correct it was last season—and as Skipper Buddy is making a desperate effort to place the Salt Lake baseball team together again and not have it look like an old-fashioned crazy quilt, he tried to fit Howard into one of the places that is sorely in need of mending.

Now, the place which Buddy chose for the former Ute was naturally the mound, and Gregory went out to pitch for the home club yesterday afternoon. For eight innings he treated the sparsely populated grandstands and bleachers to one of the best exhibitions which the Utes have been able to show in half a moon. The score stood 4-3.

Cleveland, Sept. 23.—There is one good reason why Johnny Kilbane is always in splendid condition. Johnny is a great baseball enthusiast. He is the particular pet of the Cleveland team. Whenever the Indians are home, Johnny dons a suit and practices with them.

Kilbane can play short and second better than a lot of the bright particular stars of the baseball firmament. Baseball isn't Johnny's only accomplishment. He is a fine musician. He plays the violin exceptionally well and spends much time playing for his father, who went blind suddenly.
